HUMANIZING SUBMARINES NAVAL TASK

France and Japan Lead Oppo- sition To Brit-U. S. Abolishing Program

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Having rejected the Anglo-American proposals for complete abolition of submarines, the London naval arms conference today began its efforts to reach an agreement on the next best thing—"Humanizing" of the use of submarines in naval warfare.

Although the French and Japanese delegates successfully resisted the British and American efforts to abolish the use of undersea craft in warfare, all the delegations, including the Italians who held to a middle ground in the controversy, went on record as favoring restriction of the use of submarines against merchant vessels in war time.

TWO PROPOSALS UP

As a direct result of yesterday's plenary session, therefore, there were two resolutions regarding submarines before the first committee of the conference today. France proposes a resolution asking for the preparation of an agreement for bidding submarines to act toward merchant ships otherwise than in strict conformity of rules, either of the present or future, to be observed by surface warships, while America proposed another asking the appointment of a committee to study the possibility of an agreement on the abolition, regulation of use and regulation of size of submarines.

Meanwhile the naval experts' committee of the conference completed their report on the categorical classification of vessels coming within the global tonnage, calculations to be used in limitation discussions at the conference.

When the report comes up for discussion by the various delegations it will be found to represent a compromise of the claims and demands of the powers. Cruisers with eight inch guns will go into one category, the experts decided, while light cruisers and destroyers armed with six inch guns or guns of lesser calibre will be lumped into a single category or separated into two categories according to the desires of the various nations.

No decision was reached on what tonnage limitation for light cruisers should be fixed. The first committee will decide this point.

Police Say Gangsters Are Leaving City In Face of Imprisonment.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Outraged Chicago's unrelenting drive on gunmen and gang terrorists began to bear fruit today with definite reports from the underworld that a wholesale exodus of hoodlums was in progress.

"WHO IS YOUR AIR HERO?" PRIZE CONTEST COMMENCES

Who's your air hero? Aviation has been a prominent subject before the American people since Lindbergh and the Spirit of St. Louis crossed the Atlantic. Now Byrd is at the South Pole and is using an aeroplane in his search of information about this unexplored territory.

And now comes an aeroplane contest that will interest the young and the old. On page three of this issue is a page of advertisements of local concerns and each ad carries part of the aeroplane outlined on the page. The contest is open to every reader of the Herald or Union-Herald and there is not much work to do to become one of the winners of the $10 in prizes.

Cut out each part of the aeroplane that is in the different ads and paste it on the aeroplane at top of page. When completed the names of the prominent aviators will be disclosed. After you get this finished, pick out your air hero and write a letter of not more than 100 words telling which of the aviators whose names appear on the solution has contributed the most valuable achievement and why.

Remember neatness and accuracy will be considered in crediting

WETS SELECT BIRTHDAY OF ABE LINCOLN

Big Business Men To Refute Claim That Law Is Economic Benefit.

BY WILLIAM S. NEAL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The most formidable campaign of the nation's wets against prohibition since it was written into the constitution was opened today before the house judiciary committee, which met to hear proposals for repeal or rewriting the eighteenth amendment.

ASKS PROOF

Having purposely selected Lincoln's birthday for the beginning of the hearings, Rep. George S. Graham (R) of Pennsylvania, 79-year-old chairman of the committee, called upon anti-prohibitionists to prove there is a better road to temperance than prohibition.

Admitting there is little likelihood of a dry judiciary committee favoring their measures, the wets nevertheless declared the hearings marked the beginning of their "Emancipation" from the present system.

With six members of the House who have introduced bills affecting the eighteenth amendment were given first place on the committee's calendar, anti-prohibition organizations came forward with a plan of procedure to give prohibition perhaps its more thorough airing.

Representatives of "Big Business" will be presented to refute claims that prohibition is an economic benefit; prominent women will be called upon to say the eighteenth amendment has not helped the home; "Reformed drys" will be introduced to proclaim prohibition a failure, and statesmen and others will tell the committee prohibition is responsible for the nation's crime conditions.

The resolutions before the committee include outright repeal proposals, bills giving Congress and the states control of liquor and the plan of Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democratic Congresswoman from New Jersey, for a national referendum.

TO ARGUE MEASURES

In addition to Mrs. Norton the following members of the House prepared to argue for their measure. Sabbath (D) of Illinois, Laguardia (R) of New York; Cochran (D) of Missouri; Celler (D) of Michigan.

The association against the prohibition amendment, collaborating with the House "Wet Bloc," announced it would present carefully planned arguments.

F. S. Dupont of Wilmington, Del., chairman of the association's executive committee, Gen. W. W. Atterbury, the Pennsylvania railroad's chief, and Henry B. Joy of Detroit, are expected to be the chief spokesmen for "Big Business." Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, wife of the New York banker, will marshal the women speakers.

SUMMON MARY

Editors, publicists, lawyers and statisticians all will be called to say what prohibition has accomplished or failed to accomplish.

Justice Franklin Chase Hoyt of New York, winner of the Hearst $25,000 contest, will be invited by the House "Wet Bloc" and the association, it was announced.

Meanwhile the Senate judiciary committee was holding in abeyance the resolution of Sen. Wheeler (D) of Montana, a dry, for an investigation of prohibition enforcement. Action is expected next week.

HUMANIZING SUBMARINES NAVAL TASK

France and Japan Lead Opposi-

Abolishing Program

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Having rejected the Anglo-American proposals for complete abolition of submarines, the London naval arms conference today began its efforts to reach an agreement on the next forts to abolish the use of undersea craft in warfare, all the delegations, including the Italians who held to a middle ground in the controversy, went on record as favoring restriction of the use of submarines against merchant vessels in war time.

TWO PROPOSALS UP

As a direct result of yesterday's plenary session, therefore, there were two resolutions regarding submarines before the first committee of the conference today.
France proposes a resolution asking for the preparation of an agreement for bidding submarines to act toward merchant ships otherwise than in strict conformity of rules, either of the present or future, to be observed by surface warships, while America proposed another asking the appointment of a committee to study the possibility of an agreement on the abolition, regulation of use and regulation of size of submarines.

Meanwhile the naval experts' committee of the conference completed their report on the categorical classification of vessels coming within the global tonnage calculations to be used in limitation discussions at the conference.

When the report comes up for discussion by the various delegations it will be found to represent a compromise of the claims and demands of the powers. Cruisers with eight inch guns will go into one category, the experts decided, while light cruisers and destroyers armed with six inch guns or guns of lesser calibre will be lumped into a single category or separated into two categories according to the desires of the various nations.

of information about this unex-

And now comes an aeroplane contest that will interest the young and the old. On page three of this issue is a page of advertisements of local concerns and each ad carries part of the aeroplane outlined on the page.
The contest is open to every reader of the Herald or Union-Herald and there is not much work to do to become one of the winners of the $10 in prizes.

Cut out each part of the aero-plane that is in the different ads and paste it on the aeroplane at top of page. When completed the names of the prominent aviators will be disclosed. After you get this finished, pick out your air hero and write a letter of not more than 100 words telling which of the aviators whose names appear on the solution has contributand why.

Remember neatness and accu-

CHICAGO BOMB WAR RENEWED

Two Explosions Wreck Lau-

$25,000 Damage.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Two terrific bomb explosions which brought terror to two communities and partially wrecked a laundry plant and a residence marked a renewal of the right of dynamite here today.

The first bomb, at first asserted to have been caused by an exploding boiler, blew out the rear wall of the Northwestern Laundry company, shattered windows in homes and street cars last night. Two persons were injured by flying glass.

Police, after an investigation, could find no motive for the blast.
The total damage was estimated at $25,000.

A second explosion wrecked the home of William Roberts, tossing he and his wife from bed and showering them with flying debris.

Roberts could offer no reason for the attack.

The blast blew in a wall, the basement and shattered a garage in the rear.

WETS SELECT BIRTHDAY OF ABE LINCOLN

Big Business Men To Refute Claim: That Law Is Economic Benefit.

BY WILLIAM S. NEAL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The most formidable campaign of the nation's wets against prohibition since it was written into the constitution was opened today before the house judiciary committee which met to hear proposals for repeal or rewriting the eighteenth amendment.

ASKS PROOF

Having purposely selected Lincoln's birthday for the beginning of the hearings, Rep. George S.
Graham (R) of Pennsylvania, 79-year-old chairman of the committee, called upon anti-prohibition-ists to prove there is a better road to temperance than prohibition.

Admitting there is little likelihood of a dry judiciary committee favoring their measures, the wets nevertheless declared the hearings marked the beginning of their "Emancipation" from the present system.

With six members of the House who have introduced bills affecting the eighteenth amendment were given first place on the committee's calendar, anti-prohibition organizations came forward with a plan of procedure to give probhibition perhaps its more thorough airing.

Representatives of "Big Business" will be presented to refute claims that prohibition is an economic benefit; prominent women will be called upon to say the eighteenth amendment has not helped the home; "Reformed drys" will be introduced to proclaim prohibition a failure, and statisticians and others will tell the committee prohibition is responsible for the nation's crime conditions.

The resolutions before the committee include outright repeal proposals, bills giving Congress and the states control of liquor and the plan of Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democratic Congresswoman from New Jersey, for a national referendum.

TO ARGUE MEASURES

In addition to Mrs. Norton the following members of the House prepare to argue for their measure: Sabbath (D) of Illinois; Laguardia (R) of New York; Cochran (D) of Missouri; Celler (D) of New York; Clancy (R) of Michigan.

The association against the prohibition amendment, collaborating with the House "Wet Bloc," announced it would present carefully planned arguments.

F. S. Dupont of Wilmington, Del., chairman of the association's executive committee, Gen. W. W.
Atterbury, the Pennsylvania railroad's chief, and Henry B. Joy of Detroit, are expected to be the chief spokesmen for "Big Business." Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, wife of the New York banker, will marshal the women speakers.

SUMMON MANY

Editors, publicists, lawyers and statisticians all will be called to say what prohibition has accomplished or failed to accomplish.

Justice Franklin Chase Hoyt of
New York, winner of the Hearst $25,000 contest, will be invited by the House "Wet Bloc" and the association, it was announced.

Meanwhile the Senate judiciary committee was holding in abeyance the resolution of Sen. Wheeler (D) of Montana, a dry, for an investigation of prohibition enforcement. Action is expected next week.

CITY FORESTS

Some time ago I climbed to the top of the Crites elevator and took a view of Circleville from that elevation. The trees at that time were in full leaf and more than a square mile of forest lay before me. Probably as many trees stand in the area covered by the city as formerly stood here when it was a primeval forest known only to the red man. Only the species of trees have been changed.

The great majority of the trees of Circleville are maples—the soft maple in the older part and hard maple in the more recently built parts. The error in planting soft maple for shade trees is now seen. The older soft maples are beginning to decay and the spreading habit of growth conduces to splitting in heavy winds. After a severe windstorm it is always the soft maple branches that litter the streets.

Two varieties of the soft maple are to be found along our streets—the White and the Red. The latter is the more beautiful in both bloom and leaves. Its dark red blossoms in the early spring and its leaves in the fall give a richness of color that stands out prominently among the other colors of the surrounding trees at this writing these two trees are ready to burst into bloom at the signs of spring. If there comes a week or ten days of open weather in February an observer will find bees working on the maple blossoms for their first taste of pollen and nectar. The fruit is a two-winged key that ripens early in the summer. Those of the red maple are about one inch long while those of the white maple may be two or more inches in length.

The red maple does not grow to the size of the white maple in this latitude. The average size in the city is about 12 to 18 inches in diameter, while white maple specimens are found over two feet in diameter.

The more recent plantings are of the hard or sugar maples. There are two varieties of this maple both of which stand in the front rank as street and shade trees. They grow compactly and oval in shape of top and are long lived. They will stand storms and sleet without breaking, are hardy and give a dense shade. While slower in growth than the soft maples it takes to wait the extra time it takes to grow them.

The most common is the White Sugar maple. It has smaller and thinner leaves than the other variety called Black Sugar maple. This latter has large dark green leaves coarse in texture and have a habit of drooping like a handkerchief held by the middle. I have measured some leaves that were ten inches in diameter. When the tree grows older the leaves are not so large.

The black maple has a much coarser spray than the white, and the larger branches have a tendency to droop or at least to grow horizontally.

The Norway maple, a very popular shade tree, is planted at too rare intervals in this city. The leaves resemble the sugar maple, but are deeper in color and as firm in texture as the black sugar maple. One characteristic by which it may be identified is the presence of milky sap in the leaf stalk. It is a very hardy tree, comparatively free from disease and carries its leaves longer than the American species. There is a red leaved variety. One specimen stands along N. Court-st., opposite the residence of Supt. Frank Gordon of the Forest cemetery.

The elms with their umbrella shaped tops are to be found in all parts of the city and add pleasing variety because of their height. There is always a majesty, to me, in an elm that no other tree bears. It is pre-eminently a park tree rather than a street tree.

There are a few primeval elm trees still standing in the outer parts of the city that are magnificent specimens of their kind. A somewhat smaller variety of elm called the Corky white elm, whose top is vase shaped, would make a better street tree than the American or white elm.

The Linden tree makes a pleasing variety in street trees. There are several specimens of this beautiful tree along the Washington street side of the residence of Ex-mayor John C. Goeller. The Linden is very hardy and is not too large for a city tree. The oaks, hickories and walnuts are not found along on streets, because of the difficulty in transplanting. There are a few of the last named to be found in back lots where the nut has been dropped and the sprout allowed to grow. Comparatively few of the ash have been planted, and it is probably well so, as they do not seem to be adapted to growth in the city.

Horse chestnut or buckeye number about a score. These characteristic trees should not be allowed to die out. They are very hardy and tenacious of life. I don't remember of ever seeing a dead buckeye.

The buckeye gives Ohio its nickname, yet there are hundreds in Circleville who cannot identify the tree, or distinguish it from the horse chestnut, the buckeye leaves are compound with five leaflets rather slender in form and pointed, while the horse chestnut has seven leaflets much rounded at the outer ends. The horse chestnut is not a native, but was brought originally from Greece. The fruit of both trees resemble each other very much and are great favorites with the small boys of the city.

There are a few rare trees in Circleville that are worth knowing. On W. Union-st., a short distance from Court-st., is a southern Magnolia tree that is gorgeous with bloom every spring. Another smaller specimen stands in the court house lawn. A large northern Magnolia or Cucumber tree stands in the United Brethren parish house lawn on E. Main-st. While its blossoms are not so gorgeous as the southern variety, its fruit is unique, resembling a small cucumber, and when ripe bursts open letting the seed hang out by silken threads. With its large leaves it much suggests a tree of the tropics.

Another particularly rare tree, the only one of its kind I have ever seen, stands on the same lawn. It is a species of locust, by name Sophora Japonica. As its name indicates it is a native of Japan. It blooms much later than our native locusts, usually in July. Unlike its American cousins it bears no thorns.

There are a few birches, the most ornamental of trees, some Catalpas, Carolina poplars, and becoming more and more common that tenacious emigrant from China, the Ailanthus or Sacred Tree. This is the only known tree that has no insect enemies. Any one catching a whiff of a bruised leaf or branch could well believe it.

This is not a complete list of all the trees in Circleville, but will give some idea of the extent of planting that has been done for the beautification of the city. Much more could be done in the way of planting and caring for native trees. Imagine what a desolate uncomfortable place it would be without them.

SINKING SHIP MENACES BAY

Liner Which Exploded Late Tuesday Sinks Slowly in New York Harbor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Still burning and smoking, the $4,000,000 north German Lloyd liner Muenchen was a menace today as it sank inch by inch in Hudson river bottom, New York harbor.

Danger of a collapse of a pier or damage to the Hudson tunnels directly under the river where the once proud liner was destroyed by explosions and fire yesterday, was feared.

Toll of the most spectacular harbor explosion and fire in many years stood this morning at one dead, one missing and eight injured.

Fire, which broke out in the ship shortly after it docked with 267 passengers from Bremen and a cargo of chemicals and fertilizer, was due to explosion believed caused by spontaneous combustion. Loss of cargo was estimated at $500,000 and damage to the liner at from $1,500,000 to $2,500,000.

HOSPITAL FIRE IMPERILS MANY

Firemen Fight Blaze Which Reached Great Height—No One Injured.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Lives of hundreds of patients were endangered here today when fire broke out in the laundry building of Michael Reese hospital, one of the largest in the city.

When firemen first arrived flames were shooting 100 feet to the air and dense clouds of smoke filtered through the hospital building. Two special alarms brought additional firemen and apparatus which played the burning building to prevent flames spreading to the nurses home and the hospital, separate from the laundry by a narrow alleyway.

Nurses and internes moved patients to the side of the building away from the fire. The cause of the blaze, which totally destroyed the laundry, a two story structure, is unknown.

A LAMNECK CLOTHES DRYER

means more than quick drying when the weather is bad; it means spotless clothes, STERILIZED and BLEACHED, every wash-day.

EVEN though you lived in a land of eternal sunshine you would find a Lamneck Clothes Dryer highly useful. For this remarkable appliance is more than a rainy-day substitute for sunshine. It is actually an improvement on outdoor drying.

The Lamneck cuts wash-day routine in half—saves countless steps and hours of effort. It eliminates tiresome trips to and from the yard; the straining and stretching of hanging the pieces on the line; the bother of taking them down when dry.

It protects the clothes from soot, dust, germs and the fading caused by direct sunlight. And it bleaches and sterilizes as it dries. Rapid absorption of moisture (the secret of bleaching) leaves the linens as fresh and white as they were the day you bought them. By allowing the pieces to remain within the drying chamber a short time after they are dry, all germs are exterminated.

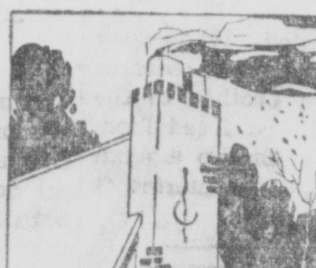

Investigate the Lamneck Dryer at once. It is low in price, available on easy terms, and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

POLAR COAL

Dr. Lawrence M. Gould, leader of Byrd's geological party in the Antarctic, is very poetical for a scientist. Reporting his discoveries on Mount Betty, he says:

"No symphonies I have ever heard, no work of art before which I have stood in awe, ever gave me quite the thrill that I had when I reached out after this strenuous climb and picked up rock, to find it sandstone. Here is what I had come all the way to Antarctica to find."

What did that sandstone mean? Among other things, that those big mountains were not altogether volcanic, but partly sedimentary. Sandstone is formed under water, not spewed out of the earth's hot interior. The top of that high mountain, and presumably the top of that whole range, had once been submerged.

More remarkable still, he found in the sandstone a layer of "highly carbonaceous material." That is to say, a sort of coal vein. Thus there was plant life once on a time with possibly a warm climate, where it is now a region of fierce winds and everlasting ice.

The knowledge of that coal is probably worth more than the coal itself. We shall not open mines there. It may never be feasible to bring coal from Antarctica. Yet such deposits may conceivably be useful some time to explorers and adventurers. The great essential in such a climate is fuel. If the Antarctic can furnish its own fuel, future expeditions will have an easier time.

INDIAN CHILDREN

Children of many lands have been the object of President Hoover's consideration and labor. Until he became President, he was most widely known for his great work in behalf of child victims of the World War. It is quite in keeping with this attitude that he should seek to better the conditions under which American Indian children, wards of our government live.

In a recent press conference, the President explained why Congress has been asked to increase the appropriation for the Bureau of Indian Affairs for next year's budget and to pass a deficiency bill quickly for an increase for the balance of the present fiscal year.

"The support in the Indian schools and health program," he said, "has not been sufficient to meet the reduced expenses of the bureau, and the result has been a serious shortage of funds for the Indian children."

At present the bureau has a balance for an Indian child of $100.00. This is not enough to allow the child to be maintained in a good health.

THE MENACE

"MASTER of MONEY" BY ROY VICKERS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

ALAN BRENNAWAY, 35, and handsome, has made a fortune in Mexico. He loves Shirley Dane, young, society girl, and, upon his return to New York, proposes to her. She refuses, saying she loves someone else. At a reception, Alan meets Mr. Cynax, financial shark, whom he distrusts. Later he receives a mysterious card that Roger Kelton, young lawyer, with whom Shirley's inheritance is invested, is bankrupt. Roger admits it is true, blaming his late father's swindling, and stating that his chief creditor is the girl to whom he is engaged.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

ALAN, turning, took the list; it consisted of a column of names and figures.

"You stopped counting about halfway," Alan said. "You must have lost it." "You're in for $450,000. That's a half million."

Alan's eyes wandered down the column. Thirty thousand dollars—$30,000; $75,000. Mostly small amounts. People living on small incomes to whom this would mean total ruin, no doubt. Widows and orphans—the kind of people who in their affairs wholly in the hands of a trusted firm. One misadventure could ruin them.

Theatres

AT THE CLIFTONA

As presented last night at the Cliftona theatre, Corinne Griffith's "Lilies of the Field," her first 100 per cent dialogue film for First National and Vitaphone, directed by Alexander Korda, with Ralph Forbes playing opposite the star, stacks up as excellent entertainment. The dialogue is snappy, the action animated and well sustained, the character-sketching exceedingly clever and the story, because of the wider scope of the screen, even more absorbing than the famous William Hurlbut play on which the picture is founded.

But, best of all, "Lilies of the Field" reveals a new Corinne Griffith. As Mildred Barker, a show girl, "the aristocrat of the screen," who as always, offers a rare treat for eye and imagination, is afforded a role which is distinctly a departure from any of her previous characterizations. In contrast to the one-time picturesque placidity of her roles, the new Corinne Griffith wears tight in a cabaret ballet performance, throws convention to the four winds and does a peppy tap dance atop a baby grand piano.

AT THE GRAND

"What is the most difficult feature in the direction of comedy in talking pictures?" a visitor at Warner Brothers Studio asked Roy Del Ruth while that skilled director was filming "Gold Diggers of Broadway," the Vitaphone all-talking, singing and dancing 100 per cent natural color picture now at the Grand theatre.

To this question Del Ruth replied: "Timing the lapse of time between funny lines and the construction of pantomime following the laugh which continues the comedy of the scene."

"Gold Diggers of Broadway," adapted from Avery Hopwood's stage hit of the same name, has an impressive cast of stage and screen talent which includes Naney Wilford, N. K. Lucas, Ann Pennington, Lillian Tashman, Conway Tearle, "Lefty" Grant, William Bakewell, Helen Foster, Winnie Lightner, and Swayne Gordon. Gertrude Astor and many others.

DR. COPELAND SAYS—

Winter "Shut-Ins"

Dr. Copeland's Health Topic Today

Too Many People Forego the Pleasures and Health Benefits of the Great Out-Doors in Cold Weather, Says Authority.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WINTER sports are becoming more and more popular each season. Fashion favors them, society favors them, and so do the doctors.

If you are tired out after the whirl of the city, of business and social cares, why not try a change of scene? And winter sports? Nothing is more health-giving than a change of scene and some form of recreation which combines with it pleasure and the benefits of health.

What is more wonderful than a Winter's day on the mountain slopes, or in the woods? You may ski, shun, or snow-shoe, for miles at a time, through unbroken paths. With the snow, pure white and deeper, perhaps, than your head, you see Nature from a viewpoint that you cannot see in any other way.

Such exercise plays upon every nerve and muscle of the body. Your senses are keener, the blood is stimulated into new life, and with it new vigor comes. I often wonder that so many of us neglect these rare sports of the Winter-time.

And after you return from the day's outing, it may be that kindred souls have gotten there before you. A blazing fire or two, a good supper, some drowsy banters, and you are to bed! Sleep is good. Maybe it never was so good!

Skating is a wonderful exercise. Everybody can have this sport without going far for it. In the cities, now, are the out-of-doors skating rinks where, for a small sum, the populace goes, skates in hand, any day or evening. This has always been a fascinating sport, and in another's time it was considered much of an accomplishment to skate well as to dance well.

Never before, perhaps, have the outdoor sports been more in evidence than this season. At St. Moritz, Lake Placid, in Canada, or some of the colleges and schools, with their Winter carnivals, people look for healthful sports. All this gives an added impetus to sports everywhere.

Don't spend all your recreation time in the close atmosphere of public places. Be out-of-doors for as much time as you possibly can. Muscular exercise is important because it stirs up the chemical and biological changes of the body. If you want muscular strength, you must exercise the muscles. If you want to have an active, virile mind, you must exercise that.

Nobody can have good health without exercise, from air and sunlight. Nature is of importance, too, and cold, bodily vigor depends upon all these things combined. Healthful recreation is of vital importance to this end.

POLAR COAL

What did that sandstone mean? Among other things, that those big mountains were not altogether volcanic, but partly sedimentary. Sandstone is formed under water, not spewed out of the earth's hot interior. The top of that high mountain, and presumably, the top of that whole range, had once been submerged.

More remarkable still, he found in the sandstone a layer of "highly carbonaceous material." That is to say, a sort of coal vein. This there was plant life once on a time with possibly a warm climate, where it is now a region of fierce winds and everlasting ice.

The knowledge of that coal is probably worth more than the coal itself. We shall not open mines there. It may never be feasible to bring coal from Antarctica. Yet such deposits may conceivably be useful some time to explorers and adventurers. The great essential in such a climate is fuel. If the Antarctic can furnish its own fuel, future expeditions will have an easier time.

INDIAN CHILDREN

Children of many lands have been the object of President Hoover's consideration and labor. Until he became President he was most widely known for his great work in behalf of child victims of the World War. It is quite in keeping with this attitude that he should seek to better the conditions under which American Indian children, wards of our government live.

In a recent press conference, the President explained why Congress has been asked to increase the appropriation for the Bureau of Indian Affairs for next year's budget and to pass a deficiency bill quickly for an increase for the balance of the present fiscal year.

"The support to the Indian schools and health program," he said, "has not been adjusted to meet the reduced post-war purchasing power of money. The result has been to pinch the allotments for food and clothing for Indian children."

At present the daily food allowance for an Indian child is 20 cents. Twice that much must be allowed "if these children are to be maintained in reasonable health."

Eventually, an enlightened policy should end the Indian problem by making the Indians a self-supporting group in the nation. Neglect and short-sighted treatment have made them the helpless dependents that many of them are today.

"MASTER OF MONEY"

BY ROY VICKERS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

ALAN BRENNAWAY, 35, and handsome, has made a fortune in Mexico. He loves Shirley Dane, young, society girl, and, upon his return to New York, proposes to her. She refuses, saying she loves someone else. At a reception, Alan meets Mr. Cynaz, financial shark, whom he distrusts. Later he receives a mysterious card that Roger Kelton, young lawyer, with whom Shirley's inheritance is invested, is bankrupt. Roger admits it is true, blaming his late father's swindling, and stating that his chief creditor is the lady to whom he is engaged.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.
LAN, turning, took the list; it consisted of a column of names and figures.

"You stopped counting about half-way," Alan said a moment later. "You're in for $483,000. Call it a half million."

Idly Alan's eyes wandered down the column. Thirty thousand dollars; $35,000; $75,000. Mostly smallish amounts. People living on small incomes to whom this would mean total ruin, he thought. Widows and orphans—the kind of people who left their affairs wholly in the hands of a trusted firm. One big amount caught his eye—$200,000. Then, opposite the amount, he read the name:

"Miss Shirley Dane—$200,000."

Slowly, as it seemed, Alan pieced his facts together. Kelton's greatest single creditor was the girl to whom he was secretly engaged. The greatest single creditor was Shirley. Therefore Shirley was secretly engaged to Kelton. Kelton was the man whose name Shirley would not give him.

Identically, and it seemed, separated by hours of thought, came the reflection that Shirley was entirely penniless. But now, of course, she could not marry Kelton. Kelton himself had said so. She would be sorry—but she would free.

His pulse leapt at the thought of her freedom. As to the fortune she had lost, he would settle twice that on her when—

He pulled himself up. What had he really been dreaming of all those seven years when he thought of that appealing face against a background of darkness? Now suddenly for the first time he understood.

He found himself being whirled from fathomless depths of introspection back to reality. He was in someone's office. Kelton's, of course. From somewhere Kelton's voice was speaking.

"Call it a half million, eh? It might just as well have been a million as far as I'm concerned."

Yes, Alan understood very clearly what he had really been dreaming all these seven years. But he must go slowly. No leaping in the dark.

"Kelton, you've told me so much you may as well tell me the rest. Have you any idea what he did with the money?"

"Oh, I know he didn't spend it on women. But how does that help me?"

"What did he do with it?" repeated Alan.

"He sank it all in a wild-cat financial scheme. There's a company with some absurd name—oh, yes, the Macedonian Developments—in which he holds pretty well

Just a Dream

It isn't often we envy a person who loses money, but when we read about a man dropping $50,000,000 in the market we sort wish we could do it.—Dayton (Ohio) News.

From the Greek

Arch is from the Greek archos, a bear, the reference being to the northern constellation of the Great Bear.

Telephonic Term

Phantom circuit is the name given to the scheme which permits a telephone talking current to be superimposed on two pairs of wires, each of which simultaneously transmits a telephonic conversation. The third, or phantom circuit, is obtained by connecting the two pairs of wires in a particular way. After it is properly arranged, three separate conversations can be carried on over a single pair of wires.

And so at last Alan's wedding present to Shirley had taken the form of a husband.

"Brennaway—I believe you're mad," cried Kelton. "You know as well as I do that those shares are worthless now."

It was still Kelton speaking. Alan decided, and tried to force his attention.

"What?" he asked absently.

"I say it's a personal loan—a gift out of pure charity."

"Which you are not in a position to refuse," Alan cut in. "Besides, you're talking awful nonsense, old man. I'm going to make something out of it, too, if you have any luck when you get there. We'll go into all that later. I take it your office can keep things going for six months or so?"

There came some kind of affirmative noise from Kelton, and Alan hurried on:

"Well, now, we shall have to move pretty quickly. Get a clerk up here, write a formal letter to Kelton enclosing a check to the value of his securities and apologizing for the delay. Then fire a wire as quickly as you can. We shall have to go along to my bank."

"Brennaway! Oh, my God!" The Westbury manner had collapsed before the nervous reaction. Alan turned away, but the next moment felt Kelton grip his arm, then cling to it like a woman, sobbing like a woman.

"I'd keyed myself up to it. I intended to kill myself after the inquiry was over. You have given me back life and everything. What's the good of trying to say I'm grateful—how can I find words?"

"Grateful be jiggered," said Alan, attempting a vast geniality. "And as to finding words—you find words to bully a tin-pot government, and you and I will make a handsome profit out of this little nightmare of yours."

Kelton was seized with a convulsion. His knees sagged, Alan gripped him and put him back into his swivel chair.

"Steady, boy, steady!" he admonished. "Pull yourself together. You've got a lot to do and you've got to do it quickly. Good Lord! Here, mop your face up. That's right. You'd better have a wash. Come along. Through here, isn't it?"

A couple of minutes later Kelton was back in his room white but steady.

"Do that letter to Kelton now, and arrange for the wire. You can let him off when he's apologized. I'll wait for you in a taxi outside. Go to it, old man, you'll feel O. K. in an hour or two."

Two hours later they were back in Kelton's office. In those two hours Kelton and Rood had been credited with half a million dollars. With the aid of another lawyer, proceedings for libel had been begun against Rood. In those two hours, too, it seemed to Alan, Kelton's whole philosophy of life had changed. His very appearance seemed different.

Robin Hood's Forest Gone

Sherwood forest is the name given to a stretch of hilly country in the west of Nottinghamshire, England, between Nottingham and Worksop, about 25 miles from north to south and 6 to 8 miles from east to west. It was formerly a royal hunting forest and the traditional scene of many of the exploits of Robin Hood and his followers. It is now almost wholly denuded and is occupied by parks.

Theatres

As presented last night at the Cliftona theatre, Corinne Griffith's "Lilies of the Field," her first 100 per cent dialogue film for First National and Vitaphone, directed by Alexander Korda, with Ralph Forbes playing opposite the star, stacks up as excellent entertainment. The dialogue is snappy, the action animated and well sustained, the character-sketching exceedingly clever and the story, because of the wider scope of the screen, even more absorbing than the famous William Hurlbut play on which the picture is founded.

But, best of all, "Lilies of the Field" reveals a new Corinne Griffith. As Mildred Barker, a show girl, "the aristocrat of the screen," who as always, offers a rare treat for eye and imagination, is afforded a role which is distinctly a departure from any of her previous characterizations. In contrast to the one-time picturesque placidity of her roles, the new Corinne Griffith wears tights in a cabaret ballet performance, throws convention to the four winds and does a peppy tap dance atop a baby grand piano.

AT THE GRAND

"What is the most difficult feature in the direction of comedy in talking pictures?" a visitor at Warner Brothers Studio asked Roy Del Ruth while that skilled director was filming "Gold Diggers of Broadway," the Vitaphone all-talking, singing and dancing 100 per cent natural color picture now at the Grand theatre.

To this question Del Ruth replied: "Timing the lapse of time between funny lines and the construction of pantomime following the laugh which continues the comedy of the scene."

"Gold Diggers of Broadway," adapted from Avery Hopwood's stage hit of the same name, has an impressive cast of stage and screen talent which includes Nancy Welford, Nick Lucas, Ann Pennington, Lilyan Tashman, Conway Tearle, Albert Gran, William Bakewell, Helen Foster, Winnie Lightner, Julia Swayne Gordon, Gertrude Short and many others.

DR. COPELAND SAYS—

Winter "Shut-Ins"

Dr. Copeland's Health Topic Today

Too Many People Forego the Pleasures and Health Benefits of the Great Out-Doors in Cold Weather, Says Authority.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WINTER sports are becoming more and more popular each season. Fashions favor them, society favors them, and so do the doctors.

If you are tired out after the whirl of the city, of business and social cares, why not try a change of scene? And Winter sports? Nothing is more health-giving than a change of scene and some form of recreation which combines with it pleasure and the benefits of health.

What is more wonderful than a Winter's day on the mountain sides, or in the woods? You may ski there, or snow-shoe, for miles at a time, through unbroken paths. With the snow, pure-white and deeper, perhaps, than your head, you see Nature from a viewpoint that you cannot see in any other way.

Such exercise plays upon every nerve and muscle of the body. Your senses are keener, the blood is stimulated into new life, and with it new vigor comes. I often wonder that so many of us neglect these rare sports of the Winter-time.

And after you return from the day's outing, it may be that kindred souls have gotten there before you. A blazing log or two, a good supper, some drowsy bantering, and you are to bed! Sleep is good. Maybe it never was so good?

Skating is a wonderful exercise. Everybody can have this sport without going far for it. In the close atmosphere of public places, now are the out-of-doors skaters, for a small sum, the populace go, skates in hand, any day or evening. This has always been a fascinating sport, and in another's time it was considered as much of an accomplishment to skate well as to dance well.

Never before, perhaps, have the out-of-door sports been more in vogue than this season. At St. Moritz, Lake Placid, in Canada, or in some of the colleges and schools with their Winter carnivals, people look for beautiful sports. All this gives an added impetus to sports everywhere.

Don't spend all your recreation

Announce Drawing for County Tournament

WILLIAMSPORT, MUHLENBERG BOYS TANGLE IN LID-LIFTER; ASHVILLE HAS EASY SAILING

Pickaway county's 1930 basketball tournament will open in the C.A.C. gymnasium next Friday, Feb. 21, with a contest between the Williamsport and Muhlenberg boys, and from the first sound of the referee's whistle excitement which will be unrivaled will prevail until after the evening of March 1, when the winner of the first flight eliminations will tangle with the winner of the second flight.

Every year this tournament draws everyone and his brother from throughout Pickaway-co and the great competitive basketball is looked forward to by each person who has any sporting blood running through his veins.

FOR THE HONOR OF THE SCHOOL

Those high school lads and lassies who have played basketball all through a long winter will take part in this tournament with one idea in mind, The Honor of The School. And when the tournament has ended late in the evening of March 1, it is positive the best team will have won.

No allis are offered by Pickaway county's fine high school teams who are forced to admit defeat in the face of the onslaughts of an opponent for they are better sports than that. They take defeat, as though it were ordered by powers other than their own, and when time for congratulating the teams which win the tourney comes, the teams which have put up the hardest fights, and those which have gone under by the largest scores will be out on the floor to shake the hands of the winning teams.

According to the schedule made out by the county school heads at a meeting in Prof. M. C. Warren's office, Ashville's boys' team seems to have drawn the choice "row to hoe" if there is any such thing in a championship tournament.

Ashville's first game will be against Scioto and will be played at 9 a.m., Feb. 22. If they win this contest, they will tangle with Walnut, which team drew a bye in the first round. If both Scioto and Walnut are disposed of, which seems entirely possible, the Ashville boys will meet the winner of the Jackson-Pickaway game and the Jackson-Pickaway and Washington game in the semi-final.

Judging from this layout, the Kauber-coached lads seem to have fairly easy sailing until the finals of the tournament.

On the other hand, the Williamsport and the Perry-two boys, along with New Holland, this triumvirate rated as plenty tough, will be fighting each other in the upper flight, as the moguls have the scheduled arranged.

Williamsport meets Muhlenberg in its first game, and if the Deer creek boys prove successful in this game they will meet Monroe. Perry-two meets Salt creek in her first game and if successful she will immediately face a worthy foe in the winner of the New Holland-Darby game which appears to favor the last year champions, New Holland.

In the semi-final, then, providing Williamsport should cop her preliminary contests, she will meet the winner of the Salt creek-Perry game and the New Holland-Darby game, which undoubtedly will be either Perry or New Holland. The winner of this game, granting they win their contest up to the semi-finals, is very much a matter for speculation.

GREAT BATTLE

Taking all these deductions into consideration it is a fact that the team which survives the upper flight will have gone through a great battle and will deserve all she gains in the finals, when Ashville will more than probably be met.

The fate of the girls drawing, however, doesn't seem to give either of the teams a very decided advantage.

NEW HOLLAND-ASHVILLE
The first girls' game will be between Scioto and Deer creek with the winner meeting Pickaway. One of the feature tilts of the first round will be the battle between the girls from New Holland and those from Ashville.

Walnut girls, undefeated in any of their scheduled games although they have been tied, unexpectedly by Muhlenberg, seems to have been the class of the regular season but when a tournament rolls round, favorites mean not a single thing.

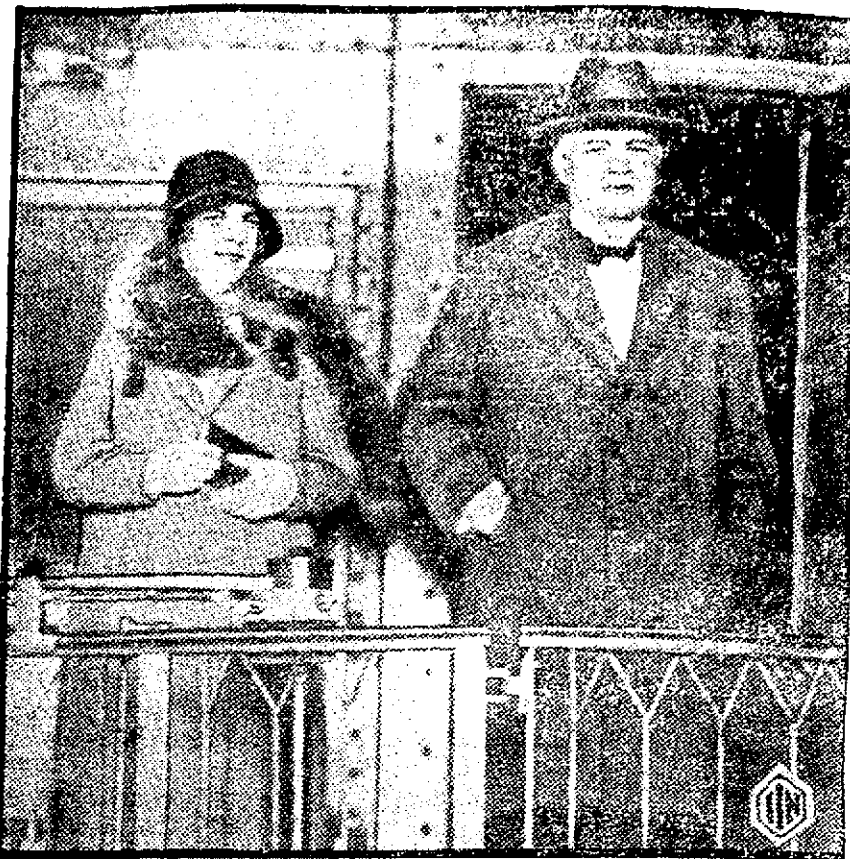

Walnut girls in order to reach the finals must defeat, first, Walnut, then Muhlenberg, which school drew a first round bye, and then the winner of the Washington-Darby-Salt creek contests.

Following is the complete schedule of games for the county tournament which promises to be bigger and better than ever:

First flight, first round:
Deer creek vs. Muhlenberg; Salt creek vs. Perry; New Holland vs. Darby.

First flight semi-final:
The winner of the Deer creek-

Muhlenberg game against Monroe and the winner of the Salt creek-Perry and New Holland-Darby game.

The second flight first round: Scioto vs. Ashville and Jackson vs. Pickaway.

Second flight semi-final: The winner of the Scioto-Ashville game against Walnut. The winner of the Jackson-Pickaway game against Washington.

The winner of the Deer creek-Muhlenberg and Monroe games and the Salt creek-Perry and New Holland-Darby games will have then qualified to meet the winner of the second flight chase.

The winner of the Scioto-Ashville and Walnut games and the winner of the Jackson-Pickaway and Washington games will have qualified in the second flight to meet the winner of the first flight in the tournament finals.

The girls' schedule:
First flight, first round:
Scioto vs. Deer creek; Monroe vs. Perry; Ashville vs. New Holland.

First flight, semi-final:
The winner of Scioto-Deer creek against Pickaway. The winner of Monroe-Perry against the winner of Ashville-New Holland.

Second flight, first round:
Washington vs. Darby; Jackson vs. Walnut.

Second flight, semi-final:
The winner of Washington-Darby against Salt creek. The winner of Jackson-Walnut against Muhlenberg.

The winner of the Scioto-Deer creek and Pickaway games and the winner of the Monroe-Perry and the Ashville-New Holland games will meet the winner of the Washington-Darby and Salt creek and the Jackson-Walnut and Muhlenberg contests in the finals for the girls' championship.

The first game will start at 7 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 21. Four games, two boys' and two girls', will be played this evening, followed by a complete day of basketball on Saturday, Feb. 22.

Play on that day will start at 9 a.m. with New Holland against Darby and will continue through the day and evening with six games on the schedule.

On February 27, the semi-final games will be started with the first game commencing at 7 p.m. when the winner of the Ashville-Scioto boys' game will play Walnut. Four games are scheduled for this evening.

On February 28, play will open at 7 p.m. with four more contests on the books.

The finals will be played at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 1.

NEW LEXINGTON FRAT TEAM AGAIN IN QUEST OF VICTORY

New Lexington's fraternity basketball team, victors over the C. A. C. in a contest there several weeks ago, will be satisfied with nothing less than another victory over the Club Thursday evening here. A large number of New Lexington fans will follow the team here to give an added touch to the affair.

New Lex's team strength is embodied in its two guards and center and these three boys are considered plenty tough.

Freddie Lowe and Bonfield, Zanesville boys, who make the trip to New Lexington every time that team plays, and Harrop, former Muskingum college center, make up the trio of New Lexington tough boys. The two forwards are also fast as can be learned from the fact that they ran rings around the Club guards at New Lexington.

The winner of this game, granting they win their contest up to the semi-finals, is very much a matter for speculation.

GREAT BATTLE

Taking all these deductions into consideration it is a fact that the team which survives the upper flight will have gone through a great battle and will deserve all she gains in the finals, when Ashville will more than probably be met.

The fate of the girls drawing, however, doesn't seem to give either of the teams a very decided advantage.

NEW HOLLAND-ASHVILLE

The first girls' game will be between Scioto and Deer creek with the winner meeting Pickaway. One of the feature tilts of the first round will be the battle between the girls from New Holland and those from Ashville. Walnut girls, undefeated in any of their scheduled games although they have been tied, unexpectedly by Muhlenberg, seems to have been the class of the regular season but when a tournament rolls around, favorites mean not a single thing.

Walnut girls in order to reach the finals must defeat, first, Walnut, then Muhlenberg, which school drew a first round bye, and then the winner of the Washington-Darby-Salt creek contests.

Following is the complete schedule of games for the county tournament which promises to be bigger and better than ever:

First flight, first round: Deer creek vs. Muhlenberg; Salt creek vs. Perry; New Holland vs. Darby.
First flight semi-final: The winner of the Deer creek-

Muhlenberg game against Monroe and the winner of the Salt creek-Perry and New Holland-Darby game.

The second flight first round: Scioto vs. Ashville and Jackson vs. Pickaway.

Second flight semi-final: The winner of the Scioto-Ashville game against Walnut. The winner of the Jackson-Pickaway game against Washington.

The winner of the Deer creek-Muhlenberg and Monroe games and the Salt creek-Perry and New Holland-Darby games will have then qualified to meet the winner of the second flight chase.

The winner of the Scioto-Ashville and Walnut games and the winner of the Jackson-Pickaway and Washington games will have qualified in the second flight to meet the winner of the first flight in the tournament finals.

The girls' schedule: First flight, first round: Scioto vs. Deer creek; Monroe vs. Perry; Ashville vs. New Holland.

First flight, semi-final: The winner of Scioto-Deer creek against Pickaway. The winner of Monroe-Perry against the winner of Ashville-New Holland.

Second flight, first round: Washington vs. Darby; Jackson vs. Walnut.

Second flight, semi-final: The winner of Washington-Darby against Salt creek. The winner of Jackson-Walnut against Muhlenberg.

The winner of the Scioto-Deer creek and Pickaway games and the winner of the Monroe-Perry and the Ashville-New Holland games will meet the winner of the Washington-Darby and Salt creek and the Jackson-Walnut and Muhlenberg contests in the finals for the girls' championship.

The first game will start at 7 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 21. Four games, two boys' and two girls', will be played this evening, followed by a complete day of basketball on Saturday, Feb. 22.

Play on that day will start at 9 a.m. with New Holland against Darby and will continue through the day and evening with six games on the schedule.

On February 27, the semi-final games will be started with the first game commencing at 7 p.m. when the winner of the Ashville-Scioto boys' game will play Walnut. Four games are scheduled for this evening.

On February 28, play will open at 7 p.m. with four more contests on the books.

The finals will be played at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 1.

NEW LEXINGTON FRAT TEAM AGAIN IN QUEST OF VICTORY

New Lexington's fraternity basketball team, victors over the C. A. C. in a contest there several weeks ago, will be satisfied with nothing less than another victory over the Club Thursday evening here. A large number of New Lexington fans will follow the team here to give an added touch to the affair.

New Lex's team strength is embodied in its two guards and center and these three boys are considered plenty tough.

Freddie Lowe and Bonifield, Zanesville boys, who make the trip to New Lexington every time that team plays, and Harrop, former Muskingum college center, make up the trio of New Lexington tough boys. The two forwards are also fast as can be learned from the fact that they ran rings around the Club guards at New Lexington.

The first preliminary will see the Grant Flying Clouds facing the Walnut Tigers at 7 p. m.

The semi-final contest will be between the Gordon Tires and a Cambridge quintet. Nothing is known of the Cambridge five although they must have some kind of a team to make a trip this far.

Lions, With Sweet In Starring Role, Go To Top of Central Buckeye.

Bexley high school's Lion cagers went into undisputed first place in the Central Buckeye league Tuesday evening when they gained a 33-22 victory over Westerville in the Otterbein college gym. Westerville had been tied with Bexley before the two teams met.

Dickey, Bexley center, played rings around Scott, huge Westerville tipoff man. Both were removed from the game on fouls, however.

Sweet, Bexley's great forward, was high point man of the contest with four goals and two free throws.

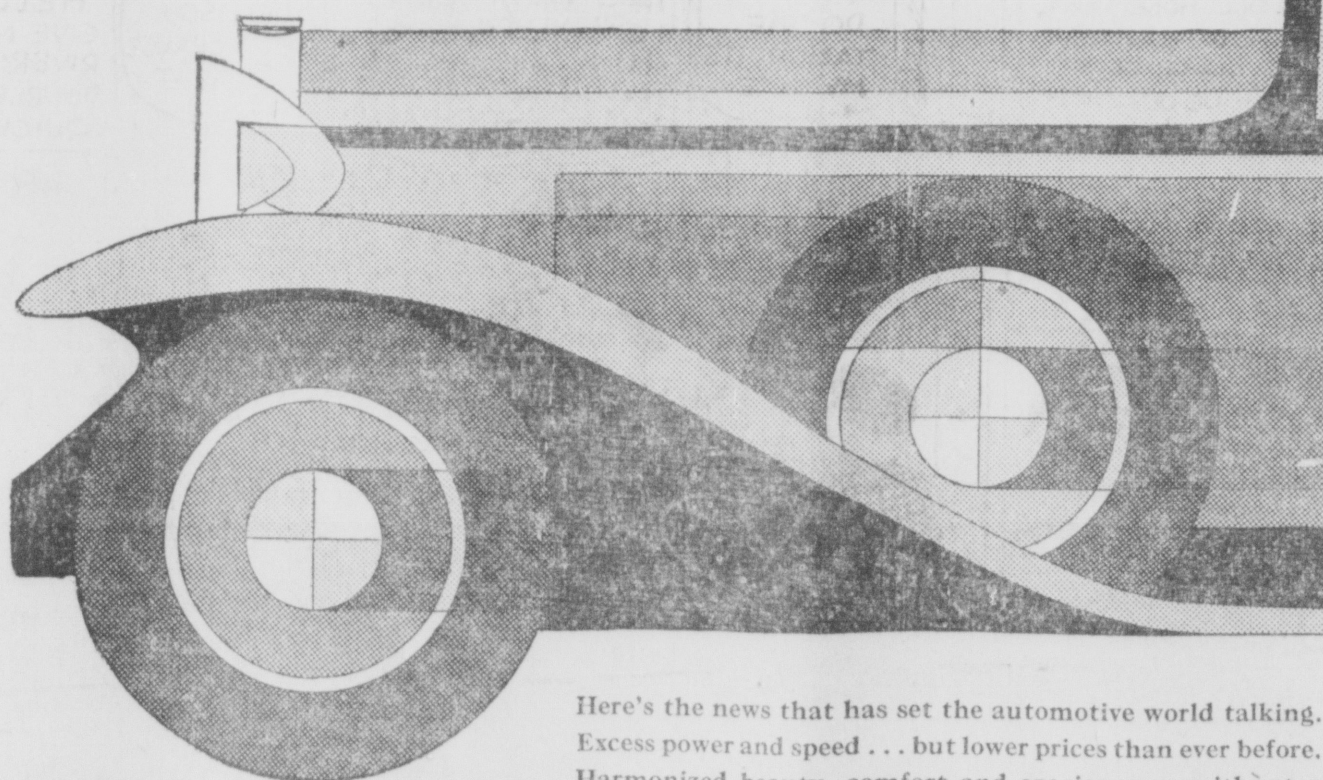

Bexley led at halftime 16-4.
